Device Aids Electric Organ to Make Use Of Its Own Echo

CHICAGO.—A device no larger than a golf bag, which makes it possible for the electric organ to create and utilize its own echo, provides a modern substitute for the reverberation provided by the stone walls and high vaulted ceilings of large cathedrals.

Official name of the unique device is the Hammond reverberation control. And its sole function, according to engineers, is production of the echoes which alone assure full organ performance.

Explaining the use of reverberation control, organ experts point out that echo is present in varying degree in all music and in most sound, being that part of sound which reaches the listener's ear by reflection from neighboring surfaces, rather than by straight air line. Because early churches mainly were large and solidly constructed, most people naturally learned to prefer organ music with considerable echo they add.

Need of the echo-maker became acute when some churches built their acoustics especially for speech —a situation that is not the best for musical reception. It also provides the only way in which real organ music can be secured out-of-doors, since the absence of walls would otherwise mean the absence of reverberation and even the largest organ would sound thin and shrill.

The reverberation unit takes the place of nature's own echo by picking up a part of each tone signal from the organ console and carrying it through a mechanism that delays each sound. The delayed signals are amplified and sent on to join the original unaltered electrical impulses or signals.

What the ear then hears is the original music as played by the organist followed quickly by its echo or reverberation, just as in a building part of the music reaches the listener directly and part of it is reflected from the walls, ceiling and reaches the ear later than the original music.

The length of the reverberation time is also controlled by the unit, this being an important factor in producing a natural-sounding echo. Some churches have a reverberation as low as three seconds and other large churches run up to 11 seconds.

Book of Paper Matches Helps Identify Citizen

HAMILTON, OHIO.—A book of paper matches carrying the advertisement of a service station in Covington, Ky., provided the only clue for Hamilton police in solving the identity of an amnesia victim.

Chief John A. Bippus reported a man walked into police headquarters and asked assistance in learning his identity.

"Where am I? What's my name? I've lost my memory," the victim said.

The only clue police found in searching the man was the book of matches bearing the name of the Graham service station, Covington, Ky. Robert Welch, assistant chief, telephoned the station and after describing the victim learned he was John Graham, Sr., 54, 1422 Madison ave., Covington, owner of the station.

John Graham Jr., who came to take his father home, told police that the elder Mr. Graham had been ill.

Auckland Hot Springs Prove Value in Actual Instance

AUCKLAND.—Maoris, who placed faith in the curative value of the Keteahi hot springs long before the white man came to New Zealand, recently demonstrated the powers of the waters on the flank of Mount Tongariro.

A party of natives, arriving by auto, carried a 250-pound invalid up to the springs on a stretcher—a rough four-mile trip uphill—and placed him in a bath made in the stream flowing from the hot springs.

Then he was housed in a tent they had erected. After a few days, they reported, the man, who had been crippled by rheumatism, was able to walk to the springs alone and shortly left almost completely cured.

Soviet Humorist Would Make Penalty Fit Crime

MOSCOW.—A humorist in Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, suggested today that factory administrators producing poor quality goods be sentenced to wear or use personally their own products.

Author of the article is G. Rykilin. He said the heavy-set director of Riga garment factory should be forced to wear the suits, with narrow, short breeches and pants legs of uneven length sent to Moscow department stores.

He suggested the director of a factory at Sarapul turning out squeaky radio phonographs be condemned to listen to his own machines for six months.

Plant Ills Expert Has Important Job

Task Complicated, Needs Much Study

Diagnosing plant ills is a complicated task and one which requires careful study. Specialists of the Clemson extension entomology and plant disease department suggest that, in arriving at decisions, consideration should always be given to possibility of winter injury and cold damage.

"Telling farmers and other plant growers what ails their plants is an important function of the agricultural workers," the specialists say. "It is the first step in prescribing the best possible remedy."

Seed treatment is not a cure-all, they point out, even though at times it is entirely effective in preventing the occurrence of diseases. "More frequently," the specialists added, "it is only one step in a disease control plan. Disease germs are harbored at times deep in the seed and away from the reaches of seed treatment."

Diagnosing plant ills, as this expert is doing here, is a complicated task and one which requires study.

They explained that diseases may be carried over on old crop refuse in the seed bed, on soil, or weeds. Other practices may be needed to obtain greatest disease control. For example, seed treatment alone does not completely control watermelon anthracnose, but in demonstrations last year seed treatment delayed the disease until late in the season when a minimum of dust applications proved practical.

Range Shelters Pay Off For Raisers of Poultry

Successful poultrymen are increasing their use of range shelters. Range shelters are easier to build and cost less than a brooder house. They can be readily moved. Growing birds get more fresh air and access to clean body-building pasture. Missouri university tests showed that birds pastured on well fertilized alfalfa were healthier and needed less feed for each pound of grain.

Two 'Rules of Thumb' Available to Dairymen

Dairymen interested in measuring the efficiency of their farm production now have two "rules of thumb" to use as guides. The more efficient dairymen are those who ship 50 gallons of milk daily for each full-time man employed in their dairy business, according to Joe Pou extension dairyman at the University of Maryland. As another guide, he states that one gallon of milk should be produced daily for each acre of cropland and pasture used in feeding the dairy herd.

Uncle Sam Says

City dwellers may complain of the hot days but farmers realize how necessary sunshine is to their growing crops. They know full well that without sunshine there will be no food—just as they know that without financial security they have no protection for retirement or for the hazards of farming. This fall, when the crops are all in, they will welcome the opportunity to invest a lot of their profit in additional Savings Bonds. With these Bonds they are confident about the future—for security in old age or for any emergency. $75 in Savings Bonds grows into $100 in ten years time.

Noted Girls' School Graduates Male Student for First Time

BRYN MAWR, PA.—A 23-year-old ex-GI created history at Bryn Mawr College when he became the first male graduate of the fashionable women's school.

"I couldn't have done it if I'd been alone," said grinning Richard Logan.

How was it to spend three years among so many women?

"Oh, it was all right," Logan replied. "Everybody treated me nicely."

"The thing I missed most," he admitted, "was getting into old-fashioned bull sessions."

Logan became a Bryn Mawr student by a freak occurrence that grew from World War II.

Before entering military service, Logan had attended the University of New Hampshire for one year. When he returned, his family moved from Quincey, Mass., to Philadelphia and under the GI bill of rights, he applied for college education.

All available schools were filled up, so Bryn Mawr offered to allow him to enter. Five other men were given the same opportunity, but each of these men dropped out of school before graduation.

While at Bryn Mawr, Dick married a fellow student. She is the former May Warren, Shawnee, Okla.

Dick said he went it alone the last year—the only male undergraduate left at Bryn Mawr.

MOSES - BLOODWORTH

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis O'Dell Brown announce the marriage of their daughter, Jacquelyn Brown Bloodworth to Mr. William Smith Moses, son of Mrs. Don Moses, of Appomattox, and the late Mr. Moses.

The double ring ceremony was performed at high noon Wednesday, August 10th, at the bride's home, with the Rev. Robert E. Garrison of Danville, officiating. Mrs. Garrinson rendered a program of wedding music.

Mrs. Lewis O. Brown, Jr., sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor, and Don Moses, Jr., of Baltimore, served his brother as best man.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street-length dress of slate blue satin, with matching hat. She carried a Testament, topped with a white orchid.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained the wedding party, immediate family, and out-of-town guests at a breakfast. After a motor trip, the couple will reside at 2701 Wycliffe Avenue, S. W., Roanoke, Virginia.

Mrs. Moses attended Virginia Intermont College, Bristol, and Mr. Moses received his B. S. degree from V. P. I., Blacksburg.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Celebrating her sixteenth birthday, Miss Barbara Anne Johnson, was entertained at a party last evening, given by her sisters, Mrs. J. L. Hudson and Mrs. K. T. Coleman, in the home of their mother, Mrs. H. G. Johnson. Flowers and candles were used throughout the rooms and the arrangement centering the dining room table carried a color scheme of pink and white. A birthday cake, resplendent with candles, and the usual birthday refreshments were served. There were outdoor games to provide diversion.
